General assemblies demand funding action

Lobbying campaign started to pressure Ryan

Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan had to run the gauntlet Monday evening (top photo) on his way into the 7th floor meeting room with Concordia's Board of Governors in the Henry F. Hall Building. An impromptu demonstration organized by the Concordia University Students Association let the minister know in no uncertain terms what most Concordians think of his new university funding proposals.

By Ken Whittingham

Monday evening's encounter between Claude Ryan and Concordia's 35-member Board of Governors has resulted in the Higher Education and Science Minister agreeing to "reconsider" his decision to allot Concordia a mere 4.9% of the new money available to increase annual operating revenues at Québec universities.

Encouraging as that may appear, Rector Patrick Kenniff is urging all members of the Concordia community to "maintain pressure on Ryan" by participating in a massive letter-writing campaign to alert Québec government officials to the extent of the indignation felt about the way Concordia is being treated.

(Concordia hopes to collect 30,000 protest letters in the next three weeks. Full details about how you can support the lobbying effort are printed on pages 4, 5 and 8 of today's TTR.)

Ryan admitted to the governors at a tense meeting in the Henry F. Hall Building Monday evening that he had "personal difficulties" with the funding formula devised to distribute government funds, and he promised to make a decision about providing additional funding to Concordia "shortly."

The governors, for their part, described parts of the formula as "illogical and indefensible," and in an unprecedented move they agreed to support a series of protest measures planned by students, faculty and staff to try to block Ryan's funding plan — as it is now constituted — before it receives final approval.

Among other things the governors gave the senior administration authorization to close Concordia for 24 hours — if it is deemed necessary — to draw public attention to the treatment the Concordia community is receiving at government hands.

If acted upon, the one-day protest would likely occur during the first two weeks in November; the date of the proposed shutdown would be decided upon in consultation with all segments of the Concordia community.

Kenniff said after the board meeting that Concordia will give Ryan two weeks to change his decision on funding. We're not in the business of making threats, the rector added, but if Concordia is not allotted its fair share of new money at the end of that time, further protests will be launched. They might include closing the University for one day to march on the National Assembly in Québec City.

The meeting between Ryan and the board was the first ever held at Concordia. The governors requested it on October 5 after learning details of the new university funding package that Ryan will submit, shortly, for approval to cabinet and the Treasury Board.

The protest campaign endorsed by the governors was conceived during a series of strategy sessions held during the past three weeks between Kenniff, Vice-Rector (Institutional Relations and Finance) Maurice Cohen, and the leadership of Concordia's student, faculty and staff associations and unions.

The plan was ratified wholeheartedly at general assemblies on both campuses attended by about 1,000 people Tuesday morning and afternoon.

Association and union leaders present at the meetings endorsed the action plan and offered to back the senior administration in trying to block Ryan's funding plan unless he makes significant modifications to it.

Ready, set... go!

Centraide campaign needs you

Concordia may be having financial problems, the stock market may be in a dizzy dive, but there are tens of thousands of Montrealers to whom these problems mean little; they're in desperate need for such basics (which we take for granted) as food, clothing and shelter.

Centraide is calling on Concordians again this year to think about how relatively fortunate we are, and to do something about those less so.

So far 268 staff members

(13%) have responded, donating an average of $58 through a convenient payroll deduction plan which means giving even this amount is painless, representing about $1 per week, or $2 per paycheque.

The theme of this year's campaign is: "Don't let indifference get the best of you." Let's not!

Please call 3682 if you have not received or have misplaced your pledge card.

Payroll particulars

Since it's always fun to talk about money — especially when it's yours — here's an elaboration of that recent memo you received about payroll changes.

Not to worry... the new system of direct deposit has several benefits that will have you singing all the way to the bank.

You want your money earlier on payday? Fine.

You want more confidentiality and less handling of your paycheque? No problem.

You don't like the inconvenience of handling your own deposits (especially when illness, vacation or bad weather intrude)? Understood.

Improved details

Those and other details will be improved once Concordia institutes its new direct deposit system which is outlined in that recent memo. The University itself benefits, too, since it saves on the manpower required to sign, deposit or hand out cheques. Research was done to find a bank which offered the best range of services and the Bank of Montreal fulfilled all the requirements

(at no charge, by the way, to the University or to its employees).

The changeover date is projected for the new year. Whether or not that deadline can be met will depend on how quickly people fill out the form that asks you to identify which account will receive your money.

The Treasury Department's Doug Meadows, Director of Finance, who has been working on this issue since early 1986, says that the new system has been designed with the aim of being as easy as possible for everyone to adjust to. If you have any questions, he may be reached at local 4934.

Travelling... the Office of Research Service's way

The Concordia University Office of Research Services would like to draw to the attention of interested faculty and administrative staff two overseas opportunities.

The first offers "senior academics, educational administrators, senior academics, etc. from Commonwealth countries a chance to undertake a study and observation tour in India in the educational field of their choice." Applications, including a bio-data form (available from the Office of Research Services) must reach the High Commission of India, 10 Springfield Road, Ottawa, Ont. K1M 1C9 no later than November 16, 1987.

The second, to Oxford, is a non-stipendiary position for the purpose of bringing to Balliol College a distinguished scholar for all or part of the 1988-89 academic year. The Visitor will be able to use all College facilities and will be entitled to free meals except during staff holidays. Applications should be sent to the Senior Tutor no later than January 19, 1988. (Address: Balliol College, Oxford, UK, OX1 3BJ.)

Complete information is available from the Office of Research Services, Bishop Court, Rm. 215, tel.: 4885.

Here's the money

The following list includes scholarships and awards with deadlines between November 1st and 20th. More information regarding them is available in the Guidance Information Centre, H-440, Sir George Williams campus.

FREE UNIVERSITY WRITING TEST TUTORING

A program now exists to provide students with free of charge one-on-one tutoring designed to assist them in passing the University Writing Test. The tutors are faculty members who are highly qualified writing teachers, thoroughly familiar with standards applied to grading the U.W.T.

For more information, interested students should leave a message for Professor Gary O'Connor at 848-2320 (9 a.m. to 5 p.m.) or call 481-2271 (evenings and weekends).

Helping to handle conflict

Seminar on problem students

by Rachel Alkallay

A student uses abusive language in class. A student threatens a professor: "I'll get you." Another won't take direction. Phones ring in the middle of the night.

What do these four actions have in common?

All are examples of types of problem students, as was discussed at a seminar held last week on problem students at the west-end campus.

The seminar, which was designed by the Learning Development Office and by Ombudsperson Suzanne Belson, Code Administrator Nancy Doray, Director of Health Services Nancy Torbit, and education consultant Marjorie MacKinnon, proved to be quite a success. With space limited to 30 faculty members, many others had to be turned away at the door.

Designed as an information session to increase awareness of the resources available for professors and part-time teaching staff, anonymous cases were presented and discussed by the program organizers and participants.

The seminar stressed actions which can be taken when a problem arises. A personality conflict or minor disturbance in class can be successfully dealt with by taking the miscreant aside and privately discussing the problem. If there is no improvement in the situation (and it is suggested that a verbal discussion be followed by a written confirmation of the fact), then a strongly-worded letter detailing the consequences of the action is sent to the student. A formal complaint, followed by a hearing where all parties are treated equally, and sanctions if necessary, results. The sanctions imposed depend on the individual case.

Suzanne Bolton

If an actual threat occurs, Security can be called to take care of the immediate threat. Following that, if necessary, the police may be brought into the matter — physical threats are not to be taken lightly.

Disgruntled students, and more particularly disturbed students, can pose a real danger if not discovered and handled when a problem arises. In a student population of 30,000, one or two cases of seriously-troubled people is the norm. The seminar speakers stressed the importance of remembering that if someone is seriously disturbing the peace of the classroom, Urgence Santé at 9-911 may be called for psychiatric cases as well as other medical problems.

Increased stress due to the pressures of receiving top marks to enter today's highly-competitive job market was cited as a factor. The director of Health Services encouraged students under stress or professors noting students with problems to alert her office to the situation.

Problem students range from those who eat and drink in class against a professor's wishes to those who follow a professor home or even threaten bodily harm or destruction of property. There have been no cases at Concordia of such threats actually being carried out, but this is only due to fast action by Health Services, Security and other responsible people.

For more information on what to do with problem students, call Suzanne Belson, Ombudsperson, at 4964; Nancy Doray, Code Administrator, at 4961; or Nancy Torbit, director of Health Services, at 3569.

New Library hours

The following revised schedule of Library services will come into effect on October 26. In approving this revision and the associated additional expenditures, the University's senior administration wishes to underscore its commitment to meeting certain essential needs of the community and its unwillingness to accept chronic underfunding of the University as a reason to accede to significant reductions in the quality of educational services offered to its students.

The revised schedule compares favourably to those of other Montreal universities and should meet the needs of both full- and part-time students.

Senate News

Student senators protest Library cuts

by Barbara Verity

A motion by student senators protesting the recent cut in Library hours was referred to the Academic Services Committee during last Friday's first Senate meeting of the year.

The committee will report on the situation at the next Senate meeting on Oct. 30.

The motion, presented at the last minute, called for reinstatement of last year's Library hours. Initially, it called for the old hours to remain in effect throughout this academic year; however, Randy Orr, who presented the Concordia University Students' Association (CUSU) motion, amended it to a call for reinstatement just until the next meeting of Senate. Several senators requested more information on the cuts for the next Senate meeting, saying the body was unprepared for the issue.

Chair Patrick Kenniff said the Library cuts were made for budgetary reasons. Part-time Library staff gained union accreditation during the summer, bringing their wages into line with full-time personnel. This increase in salary costs would result in a $200,000 budgetary increase for the University if the same hours were maintained as last year.

Vice-Rector (Services) Charles Giguère said that, as a result, a choice had to be made between cutting the Libraries acquisition budget for serials or reducing the number of hours.

Vice-Rector (Academic) Francis Whyte said that if the serials acquisition budget was not maintained, irreparable damage would be done to research at Concordia.

The student senators, who strongly protested cuts to Library hours, distributed a petition which showed that study hours in the Norris Library have been reduced by 23 hours per week, and in the Vanier by 23 and a half hours. The hours when the circulation desk is open in both libraries have been cut by about 14 hrs./wk.

"The cuts are significant, and have gone too far in reducing access to libraries at this University," Orr commented, adding that the situation particularly affects part-time students, who study over weekends and evenings.

Director of Libraries Al Mate said the cuts have been made in the late evening from Monday to Thursday as well as on Saturdays and Sundays. Giguère added that the Libraries presently are closed on Sundays, but as of Sept. 28 they will be open for study from 12:00 noon until 5 p.m., as well as on Saturday.

Several faculty and administrative members on Senate responded with concern about the cuts, but called for more information about the issue. As a result, Senate referred the motion to the Academic Services Committee without voting on it.

Giguère added that a decision will be forthcoming in a week to 10 days on whether classroom study space can be made available to students, which he said would be a short term solution to the situation.

Research centres approved

In other matters the senators approved a motion that Senate recommend to the Board of Governors the establishment of two new research centres at Concordia. The centres are the Concordia Signal Processing and Communications Research Centre (CONSPICOM) and the Concordia Pattern Recognition and Machine Intelligence Research Centre (CONPARMI), both in the Engineering and Computer Science faculty.

CONSPICOM will foster joint research in the two areas of signal processing and communications, as well as hold seminars and receive visiting scholars. The concentration of expertise in these areas at Concordia will enhance the possibility of obtaining funds from governments and industry.

CONPARMI will bring together expertise and facilities to undertake major research projects in high technology. The centre will generate funding for expanded research projects and create a technology transfer system to ensure that its efforts contribute to the economic and social well-being of Canada.

The motion to recommend establishment of these centres was made by the Senate Research Committee, which also wants the centres' performance reviewed at an appropriate time.

Speaking for the committee, Whyte said it is currently drafting a policy to deal with the establishment of research centres at Concordia and for their ongoing operation. This policy, expected to come before Senate this year, will be applied to the new centres as well as to existing ones.

In other reports, Vice-Rector (Institutional Relations and Finance) Maurice Cohen said that the Education Ministry will provide word soon on the distribution of $40 million in additional funds to Quebec universities. Concordia may be able to balance its budget as a result of the extra funds, exclusive of its accumulated deficit.

S.I.N. use reduced

Vice-rector Cohen also reported that social security numbers will no longer be used for identification purposes at Concordia, except for payroll; a new number will be established for other identification purposes such as use of the Library. Senate also approved a motion that the Admissions Committee use the most current edition of the Country Index as its main reference document for international student placement. The index, in use for years at Concordia, deals with interpretations for use in evaluating foreign secondary academic credentials. The motion was made to update a 1975 Senate decision which called for use of the 1971 edition of the index.

Elections were also held to the Steering Committee of Senate. Chosen were Profs. Martin Kusy, Fred Hamblin, Sandra Paikowsky, Gail Valaskakis and Kathryn Waters.

Professors N. Allison, M.M. Douglass and W. Knitter were nominated to the Senate Appeals Committee; Dean M.E. Szabo and Professors Dennis Dicks and Robert MacKay to the Graduation Ceremonies Committee; and Professor Eileen Preston to the Concordia Council on Student Life.

Prof. Lee Adler was appointed to the Academic Programs Committee of Senate; and, finally, Professors Gary Boyd and Peter Wade were appointed to the Senate Sub-committee on Academic Computer Policy.

Appelbaum will seek second term

Commerce and Administration Dean S. H. (Steve) Appelbaum has informed the Board of Governors that he will seek a second term as dean at the end of his current mandate in June 1988. The five-year appointment would run until June 1993.

As is standard practice for

senior Concordia administrators, the governors will establish an evaluation committee shortly to review the incumbent's record. If for any reason the committee should recommend against reappointment, an advisory search committee would be established in November to seek a new dean.

Appelbaum joined Concordia in 1979, and served as chair of the Management department before being appointed dean in 1983.

Bookstore robbed

Two Concordia bookstore employees were robbed last week while transporting receipts down the corridor from Birks Hall to the Accounts Office in the Norris Building.

The incident occurred Tuesday, September 17th, at 6:40 p.m. No one was injured, and the lone bandit is still being sought.

The downtown bookstore, located in the Henry F. Hall Building, was using Birks Hall as an annex because of the tremendous volume of books on hand at the start of the fall term. The Accounts Office, considered theftproof, is located about 70 feet from the door to Birks Hall. The robber struck just outside the locked Accounts Office door.

Additional security measures were implemented immediately after the robbery. Armed guards employed by off-campus security firms are now transporting cash between non-secure areas on campus.

Despite an all-out media blitz, only 6,500 tickets were purchased for the annual Shaughnessy Cup Shrine Bowl last Saturday at McGill's Molson Stadium.

For Concordia football fans the dark clouds in the sky were even gloomier as the Stingers wound up on the losing end of a 31-20 score against cross-town rival McGill Redmen.

The Stingers are now 1-1 in 1987 Ontario-Quebec Interuniversity Athletic Union play. They host the University of Ottawa Gee-Gees at Loyola Campus Field this Saturday afternoon. Fans should take note that the starting time has been moved back two hours, to pleased with the pre-game publicity the event attracted. "It was certainly good for the game," he commented. "We need more of that."

Players from both Concordia and McGill visited the hospital a few days before the game to hand out sweaters, chat with the children and sign autographs. Representing the Stingers were tri-captains David Cescon, Joe D'Elia, Martin Ferdais, five-year veteran Mike Bertone and rookie quarterback Ron Aboud.

Clifford Skarsiedt

Ahhhhh... almost! Stinger quarterback Ron Aboud (12) goes back to pass in Saturday's Shaughnessy Cup Shrine Bowl. McGill won the game 31-20.

3 p.m., so as not to conflict with the 1 p.m. contest at McGill between the Redmen and Bishop's.

Last Saturday's crowd was well below the 15,000 people organizers were aiming for. The disappointing turnout was attributed to a number of factors: it was cloudy and cool outdoors; the Shriner's parade clogged up traffic downtown and many potential fans gave up trying to get to the stadium and went home; few if any of the 5,000 Shriners in town for the convention actually sat in the crowd at gametime, although many of them staged a highly entertaining half-time show and then there were the Expos, who had a big game that night at the Big "O," which drew more than 30,000.

But as one official said: "Anytime I see more than 500 fans out at a college sports event I'm amazed these days."

Big crowd or not, Concordia head coach Skip Rochette was Rochette, acting director of Fitness, Recreation and Athletics Robert Philip and associate director Doug Daigneault, a former professional football player himself, were also on hand.

Rochette was naturally disappointed with the loss. McGill continues to dominate Shaughnessy Cup play, symbolic of university football supremacy in Montreal. The Redmen improved their record in the 19-year competition to 14-4-1. Concordia is now 4-9 while its predecessor Loyola had a 0-5-1 record.

Frank Shaughnessy Sr., after whom the Cup is named, was a great athlete who played under Knute Rockne at Notre Dame. He also played major league baseball, served as president of the International Baseball League, and in 1928 coached the Loyola College football club to a Dominion Intercollegiate Intermediate Championship...

Women's basketball coach named

In keeping with its stated policy of increasing the number of women on staff, the Department of Fitness, Recreation and Athletics has announced the appointment of Louisa Zerbe as head coach of the women's varsity basketball team.

She is the third woman (first as coach) hired by the department within the last 18 months.

Zerbe served as an advisor to the Concordia team last season, and took over the head coaching duties on an interim basis in January following the resignation of Polly Stevens. In addition to her role as coach, Zerbe will act as an assistant to Kathy McDonald, associate director responsible for the women's program.

Impressive credentials

Zerbe comes to Concordia with some very impressive credentials, having guided the University of Lethbridge Pronghorns women's team from 1979 to 1986. In 1985-86 they won the bronze medal at the CIAU (Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union National) championships and ranked in the CIAU top 10 over the past five seasons.

During her tenure at Lethbridge she was named CIAU Women's Basketball Coach of the Year (in 1984-85). This past summer Zerbe, who has her master's degree in physical education and sport psychology from the University of British Columbia, worked with the Canadian National Junior Team in Ottawa and on tour in Spain and Portugal.

"I'm very excited about coming to Concordia," says Zerbe. "Having been involved in the program last year I can see there is real potential in the Concordia women's basketball program. With the quality of players graduating from the CEGEP system, we expect to develop into one of the strongest competitors in Canada."

Funding always a concern

Funding is always a concern.

EMPLOYMENT

ments made by women in the audience, Davidson-Palmer warned that there were a number of myths or widely-held beliefs about women in the work place that women should take care not to buy into. Among these is the belief that women have to work twice as hard as men in order to succeed. "If you assume that, then you may also assume that if you do work twice as hard, you will necessarily reach your goal. But in some organizations it just isn't so. You'll never get there, no matter how hard you work."

She also dismissed the claim that women who succeed are "back-biters" who don't want to help younger women. "Women in management positions are often very alone," she said. "And not everyone behaves the same way — some men are ungenerous too."

In addition, she said, day care must cease to be viewed as a "women's" concern and begin to be seen as a larger, societal issue if women are to stop carrying the full burden for child care and thus be hampered in their careers.

Concerns raised by the women present at the lecture ranged from parental leave and salaries to women's attitudes about themselves, obstacles to entry into non-traditional jobs and lack of women's networks. These matters will be further considered in later sessions of the course and discussion series.

One versabrade machine alone costs $10,000 and much of the present equipment needs to be updated. One of Kerby's goals is to see that she gets the funding she needs from government as well as corporations.

"Both have much to gain from this. As with the literacy problem, the government is realizing that it is cost-efficient to educate the disabled, to get them into the workforce rather than on welfare rolls. And the disabled are able and willing workers. Corporations don't hire them out of fear and ignorance, not because they are incapable. People have to stop looking at the disability and focus on the ability, and to hire for what they need and stop making excuses for what they don't understand," says Kerby.

There are some changes. Major corporations are taking more of an interest, and more disabled students are entering the University system. Kerby connects the two, joking that any student (disabled or not) who can survive registration at Concordia can survive in industry.

"These students are not here on anyone's back," says Kerby. "They're here because they are bright, and on top of that they have overcome all obstacles." In the past, disabled students have won both national and entrance scholarships. Upcoming scholarship announcements will include nine disabled students.

In all her work, Kerby stresses independence. "We make it very clear that we are not social or rehab. workers. We offer help, but students have to seek it. And they must always take responsibility."

As a member of the Safety Committee, Kerby was instrumental in setting up the evacuation procedures for the disabled. Students are made aware of them at an orientation session, and her office makes them available in braille, large print and on tape. "Students become safety conscious, to learn where to be and not to be. No student can rely on an institution. They must rely on themselves," says Kerby.
